

Dr. Mehanna graduated at the top of his class from the Saint Joseph Faculty of Medicine in Beirut, Lebanon. He completed his neurology residency program at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas. He completed a fellowship in movement disorders at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas, then completed another fellowship in movement disorders with emphasis on deep brain stimulation (DBS) at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation in Cleveland, Ohio. He is currently an Associate Professor of Neurology, assistant movement disorder fellowship director and director of the movement disorder curriculum at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston- McGovern Medical School. He is also the co-director of the Huntington Disease's Society of America (HDSA) center of excellence at his institution. Dr Mehanna has been repetitively elected by his peers to Superdoctor Rising Star in Texas, Top doctors in Houston, and is featured in "Who's who in America". He has authored more than 60 publications in addition to a book on Deep Brain Stimulation and being guest lead editor for a special of the journal Parkinson's Disease. He is a member of the editorial board of Parkinsonism and Related disorders, as well as Clinical Parkinsonism and Related Disorders, and is an invited ad-hoc reviewer for more than 20 other journals. He is a full member of the IAPRD and active in different committees. He is also a member of the Parkinson Study Group (PSG) and is active in three different working groups within it. Dr Mehanna has received five teaching awards over the last 10 years and has been invited to talk nationally and internationally