

Kazuko Hasegawa is Head of Neurology and Director of the intractable neurological disease research center of the National Hospital Organization, Sagamihara National Hospital Japan. She received MD (1977) and PhD (neuropathology about MND, at 1988) from Kitasato University school of Medicine. She worked as an assistant professor in department of Neurology in Kitasato University during 1981-2000. She moved to Sagamihara National Hospital as a department head in 2001. She has several boards certification: Japanese Neurological Society Board (1981), Japanese Internal Medicine Society Board (1982), Educational commission for medical residents (1986).

She has interested in Movement disorders for more than 30 years especially genetic movement disorders such as familial PD, Huntington's disease and dystonia. She has concerned with many guidelines for diagnosis and management (Japanese neurological society), for example Parkinson's disease, dystonia, Huntington's disease, NBIA and so on. Her most contribution in research work is discovery of locus of PARK8.